SO GOES THE WORLD.

BY JOHN A. JOYCE.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you; Laugh, and the world aluxos with you. Weep, and you weep alone. For this brave old earth must be row its mirth, it has trouble enough of its own.
Sing, and the hills will answer:
Sigh! It is lost on the world waver.
The echoes bound to a loyful sound, But shrink from a woleing once.

Bejoice, and men will seek you;
Grieve, and they turn and go;
They want full measure of all your pleasure.
But they do not want your woe.
Be giad, and your friends are many;
Be sad, and you lose them all.
There are none to deeline your nectared wine,
But alone you must drink life's gall.

Feast, and your halls are crowded;
Fast, and the world goes by.
Succeed and give and it helps you live,
But no man can help you die.
There is room in the halls of pleasure
For a long and lordly train.
But one by one we must all file on
Through the narrow sisles of pain.

AN OLD MAID'S ADVICE

For two whole years Capt. Jumpison had been the idol of the spinsters of Bunborough-by-the-sea. Cheery, goodnatured and good-looking, his private means were limited, if they existed at all, and his pay was insufficient to ena-ble him to indulge in any of those ex-pensive tastes which lure young men from the milder delights of tea and ten-He neither hunted in winter nor nis. He nother hands in whiter nor played tennis in summer, and he was always ready to dance half the night at the Bunborough balls. He really was a very nice man indeed; everyone agreed that he would make a very nice husband for any one of the young la-dies of Bunborough to whom he might finally determine to offer himself; and for two years he distributed his favors freely but with almost absolute impar-"There is safety in numbers, and the cowards know it," said Miss Grayson, of the Valley cottage, to Maud Oakley, who had been unburdening her soul to her. Miss Grayson was the kindest of who had been undurtening her som to elderly ladies where young people's love affairs were concerned, and Maud Oakley had known her since she (Maud, not Miss Grayson) was a baby. "Cownrds" said Miss Grayson again under her breath, and Miss Oakley snilfed deprecatingly. She had been talking to Miss Grayson for an hour, and had told her sympathetic listener a good deal that was, in the language of the vulgar, "stale news." Miss Grayson was quite aware (all Bunborough might have told her) that Captain Jumpison had quite recently shown a distinct preference for the Oakley family. He dined there whenever he was asked, and had won General Oakley, sonfidence by delicately expressing unbounded belief in his stories—not always an easy task; he had been most attentive to old Mrs. Oakley during supper time at several balls, and most attentive to old arrs bakey dur-ing supper time at several balls, and his visits to the house for 5 o'clock toa had not been limited by invitations is-sued to him or confined to those occas-ions when General and Mrs. Oakley were at home; but there were two Mrs. Oakleys, and to which of them Captain Jumpison intended his inten-tions to be devoted was a question which Bonborough-on-the-Sea would like to have answered. It was not strange, however, that the public were puzzled when Mand Oakley had had to confess to Miss Grayson that she had no very distinct idea whether her sister Geraldine or herself was preferred by the man to whom she had unreservedly lost her heart, though she admitted she had her fears.

"Geraldine has Dr. Coverdale," said Maud. "She would be quite happy with

"Quite so," said Miss Grayson. "It

maud. Sne would be quite happy with him."

"Quite so," said Miss Grayson. "It never rains but it pours."

Maud wondered whether it had ever "poured" with suitors in Miss Grayson's young days, and said nothing.

"Can't wo make Dr. Coverdale propose to her?" said Miss Grayson, "And Goraldine accept him?" sdded Maud, doubtfully. Miss Grayson was a determined looking old lady, but even she seemed to consider the project impracticable.

"Did you ever try boohoo with any one?" said Miss Grayson.

"What!" said Maud.

"Boohoo, boohoo, boohoo," cried Miss Grayson excitedly; and an elderly lady who had selected that precise moment to be announced by Miss Grayson's pretty little parlor maid very nearly turned and fled. She came in, however, and her impression that Miss Grayson had gone demented was confirmed by the apparently imbecile laughter with which her greeting was received.

Maud rose to leave, and Miss Grayson; who had recovered her presence of mind sufficiently to inquire after her new visitor's husband (he had been dead seven years) accompanied her to the front door.

"Don't you understand, you silly child?" she said, kissing her affectionately on the doorstep. "Cry, cry, cry your eyes out; not one of the wretches in a baker's dozen of them can stand tears." And the kind old lady returned to pacify a justly indignant, widow, while Miss Oakley walked home with a light breaking slowly in on her as she pondered the somewhat enigmatical advice she had received.

Meanwhile Captain Jumpison was striding down the finity read laading vice she had received.

vice she had received.

Meanwhile Captain Jumpison was striding down the flinty road leading from the barracks to Bunborough as if he trod on air. He scarcely knew how he had transferred himself from unihe had transferred himself from uniform to his newest mutit; but between his beating heart and the tweed coat which formed its outermost covering he could feel the communication which had that afternoon altered the course of his career forever. "On her majesty's service" it had arrived, and "on her majesty's service "it informed him he was expected to proceed forthwith to a somewhat distant portion of her dominions, where, in return for a salary exceeding his wildest dreams, he was to perform duties as to which he still felt vague. But they prohably included exceeding his wildest dreams, he was to perform duties as to which he still felt vague. But they prohably included the dispensation of substantial justice with lavish hand to sundry swarthy fellow-aubjects, and the instruction of the male portion of them in the use of obsolete weapons and the evolutions of an improved drill.

The climate—well, every rose has its thorne and "Government House" and his society would reconcile Geraldine Oakley to a bursting thermometer and a diet of quinine. She would have her sister stay with her if she felt lonely; he was quiet fond of Maud, though, of course, she did not care for him; did she not always retire when he came to tea and leave him alone with herelder sister, and always refuse to give him more than four dances in one evening? But Geraldine was different. Dr. Coverdale would do very well for Maud when Geraldine was gone. There she was—Maud, not Geraldine—standing on the top step waiting for him as he almost ran up the garden walk.

"How do you do?" she said shyly, as she ushered him into the drawing room. "I will go and tell Geraldine you are here."

He was delighted; could anything

here."

He was delighted; could anything have been more thoughtful? But oddly enough, she did not go. She sat down, on the contrary, and began fingering a "chair back" nervously.

"It's a fine day," she said, and then stopped. "Hang it," he thought, "I meant to tell Geraldine the news first, but there's no harm in beginning with her."

So he began, pulling out his official letter to show her.
"I have come, Miss Oakley, to tell you some news and ask you to congrat-"What!" she exclaimed, "are you engaged to be mar "Oh, no!" he answered—"not exactly—that is not yet—in fact I mean not

"Oh, no!" he answered—"not exactly—that is not yet—in fact I mean not yet—that is not yet—in fact I mean not exactly."

And he got very red, and so, curiously enough did she. She looked very pretty, blushing, and with her lower lip quivering a little. Geraldine was not so pretty as Mand, he admitted to himself as he looked at her; but so much the better, Geraldine would be all the less likely to flirt, if, that is, there was any one at Government House to flirt with.

"No," he said, "it's the appointment I told you (or was it your sister?) my uncle was trying to get for me—the very thing I have been wanting."

And he proceeded to paint the charms of the new career opening before him in glowing colors. He said nothing about the quinine. When he came to an end of all the details she was sitting, with an expression of deep interest, looking at him, and he felt that had she only been Geraldine the very moment would have arrived—that precise opportunity not slways easy to obtain, particularly in a small villa. "And so," he said, feeling he must bring his tale to a conclusion, and give her an excuse for going to fetch her sister, "and so. Miss Oakley, I leave Bunborough very soon and have come to say good-by."

"Good—good—boo-hoo."

She did not hit the precise note which had startled Miss Grayson's visitor; but the effect on him was even more electrifying.

"My God!" he murmured.

"Boo—hoo, boo—hoo—o." And she buried her head in the sofa cushions.

For a minute he said nothing; his first inarticulate entreaty to her died on his bafore her storm of grief, so he

Boo-moo, boo-moo-c. And she buried her head in the sofa cushions. For a minute he said nothing; his first inarticulate entreaty to her died on his lips before her storm of grief, so he bit his mustache in silence. Then the front door slammed; Miss Geraldine Oakley was going out for a walk, totally unaware of his arrival. Could he stop het? He could hardly open the window and shout. He moved toward the drawing room door, but he had to pass the sofa, and as he did so the girl on it rose, and she, too, half dazed, was seeking a way of escape; and as their hands met on the door handle she sank sobbing into his arms.

ing a way of escape; and as their hands met on the door handle she sank sobbing into his arms.

"Don't don't," she whispered, hardly articulately; but he was doing nothing from which he could desist, for he could scarcely let her drop on the floor. "Good God!" said Captain Jumpison again; "will no one come?" But the house was still; and he reflected that perhaps it was as well that no one should come in at that precise juncture—at all eyents, not without warning; and so there was another pause, broken only by her sobs. He could see her sister through the muslin blinds; she was looking over the garden gate, talking to some one; would she change her mind and bring whoever it was in to tea? If she did, Mand would surely hear them entering the house and retreat. But sne and, annu would surely lear them-entering the house and retreat. But Geraldine stood talking at the gate. Only the rector wore a high hat at Bun-borough-by-the-Sea—and Dr. Coverdale. "Click!" went the garden gate, as Geraldine passed into the sunny roadway. "Boo-hoo!" It was a very gentle one It was a very gentle one

"Boo-hoo! It was a very genue one this time from somewhere near his watchpocket.
"Click!" went the garden gate, as it swung back on its hinges.
And Captain Jumpison surrendered at discretion.
